Ásgrímur Jónsson: Af Fljótsdalshéraði. Hjaltastaðabláin. Beinageitarfjall í baksýn. Vatnslitamynd (1951). Eig. Ásgrímssafn.

Ásgrímur Jónsson: Scene from Fljótsdalshérað in East-Iceland. This region with its green marshes between naked rock ridges framed by magnificent basalt mountains, was one of the artist's favourite motifs. — Ásgrímur Jónsson (1876—1958) was a pioneer of modern painting in Iceland. His main themes are the nature of Iceland and Icelandic folklore. The artist bequeathed a large number of paintings with his house and home to the people of Iceland. The Ásgrímur Jónsson Gallery was opened in this house on November 5 1960.

Ásgrímur Jónsson: Fra Fljótsdalshérað i det østlige Island. Akvarel (1951) I denne egn med dens talrige grønne moser mellem nøgne klipperygge og omkranset af knejsende basaltbjerge, fandt kunstneren nogle af sine yndlingsmotiver. Ásgrímur Jónsson (1876—1958) var en pioner inden for moderne islandsk malerkunst. Hans motiver er fortrinsvis hentet fra Islands natur; men også folkesagnene har været ham en stor inspiration. Kunstneren testamenterede det islandske folk en mængde kunstværker foruden sit hus og hjem. Ásgrímur Jónssons Samling i kunstnerens atelier og hjem blev åbnet den 5. nov. 1960.
