

Manuscript by Captain Sigtryggur Jónasson

Bjarni Benediktsson – Forsætisráðherra – Sigtryggur Jónasson – P. H. T. Thorlakson – Haraldur Bessason – University of Manitoba – Vestur-Íslendingar – Ljósrit

Tekið af vef Borgarskjalasafnsins bjarnibenediktsson.is Einkaskjalasafn nr. 360 Stjórnmalamaðurinn

Askja 2-30, Örk 5

©Borgarskjalasafn Reykjavíkur

May 26 - 1964

This manuscript was examined today by Professor Haraldur Bessason of the University of Manitoba. He assured me that this was the handwriting of the late Captain Sygtryggur Jonasson.

P. H. T. Thorlakson

The Karsenau is at heart an adventurer. In his small but sturdy ships he battled the winds and waves in search of adventure. The approach of the Viking ships struck terror into the hearts of the people whose shores he raided in search of plunder. His independence of spirit could break no tyranny. So when Harald the Fair haired undertook to bring the whole of Norway under his sway a number of the more intrepid

2. Landed gentry, nobles and petty kings for sake their homes, lands and titles and took to the sea in search of new homes. They came first to the "western Islands"
which was their name for the British Isles, mostly they settled in Ireland where they remained for several generations intermarried and became closely allied with the Irish race.
All the while they continued their explorations. They discovered Greenland

9 and Iceland and established settlements there. Iceland though barren and inhospitable yet allowed them to lead their own lives, to establish their own government, and to wrest a meager living from the land and sea. For a thousand years they lived independently of other nations, though nominally a dependency first of Norway, and later of Denmark, making their own laws and electing their own parliament.
~~Early in the seventeenth~~

4. about 1870 the exodus to America began. at first this was only sporadic consisting mostly of adventuresome young men. But in the years 1874-5-6 the movement gained momentum and ~~some~~ between 15-16000 people came over. Of these some settled in the U.S. but ~~the~~ a large majority made their homes in Canada - mostly in the Province of Manitoba.

I shall ~~principally~~ direct my remarks ~~primarily~~ to the Manitoba settlement, because I was one of this group.

5. The life of new comers at that time was not altogether enviable. Planted in a strange ~~land~~ environment, unused to the ways and customs of the country, ignorant of the language and lacking the means and requisites necessary for them to enable them to make a new start in life, their lot was not a happy one. The task of gathering fuel and bringing in supplies for the family needs was indeed an arduous one. The wood choppers' axe was new to them and many a bump and bruise they suffered

6. while wielding it. They must needs be their own beasts of burden, for every thing had to be carried on their own shoulders, or else drawn by hand-sleighs over the snow ~~and~~ ^{or} ice. In summer flat bottomed boats driven by their own arms served the same purpose.
They was cut and mak-ed by hand, built into starks and then when winter came it had to be hauled on hand-sleighs may be a mile or more to the stable.
In the winter time they fished through the ice.
Holes had to be cut and then a net had to guided by a long pole

7. a distance of 20 or 30 feet to another hole where it was anchored to a cross bar. Pulling out the net and removing the fish from it in extreme winter weather was a chilling task. Well might they have said with the Duke in "As you Like It": "Here feel we but the penalty of Adam -- etc." It fell to their lot to suffer the extreme rigors of winter and the extreme sweating heat of summer. I added to that was the annoyance of the mosquitoes and bullfogs. We here are more or less immune to the bite of the mosquito, but in Iceland they have no mosquitoes, so ~~there~~ new comers

8. Being non-immunized were set upon by these pests with relentless ferocity. I remember men going about with mosquito nets over their faces and wearing woven mitts on their hands in mid summer.

In the early years the settlers were unable to extract a living from their farms and many had to go to Winnipeg with the first days of Spring to seek work. And later in the summer a large number went to the harvest fields.
That left the mother at home with the children to care for. She must

9. Sew, knit, patch and darn, wash scrub and iron from morning till night. But always the most difficult task of all was to find sustenance for the many little mouths she must feed - The pioneer woman was wonderful, her self sacrifice, courage and endurance was marvellous - (the greatest woman)
The struggle for education The Icelandic citizen.